

Minnesota's voter turnout was highest since JFK and Eisenhower

Turnout among eligible voters in Minnesota during presidential elections reached its highest point since similar rates in 1960 when John F. Kennedy won the state and the presidency, and prior to that, Dwight D. Eisenhower's reelection.

